

The Window Valet

An 8-week plan to turn GHL into the business's central nervous system

Prepared for Josh LeClair by John Carlo Caintic · August 20, 2026

The goal is simple to state and hard to fake: every lead, sale, and customer should move through one clean, dependable system, and you should be able to see what's happening without asking anyone. We're getting there in eight focused phases, one objective at a time, so we fix what's broken before we build what's new.

Why this order

Building reporting on top of a broken foundation just produces confident-looking wrong numbers. Adding AI on top of inconsistent workflows just automates the inconsistency. So the sequence is deliberate: stabilize first, then build one clean process, then make it visible, then connect the outside systems, then optimize, then automate further. Each week has exactly one objective, and anything we discover along the way that isn't urgent gets logged for its proper week instead of derailing the current one, that's what keeps this moving instead of sprawling.

The 8-week arc

Week	Focus	What it delivers
1	Stabilize & clean GHL	Every lead is captured, assigned, followed up with, and doesn't fall through a gap. Nearly complete
2	Lead & sales process	One predictable customer journey, regardless of whether the lead came from Facebook, Google, phone, a QR code, or a partner.
3	Reporting & accountability	Open GHL and see leads, sales, close rate, and marketing ROI at a glance, no more asking the team for numbers.
4	MyBlindCo integration	A clear map of what lives in GHL, what lives in MyBlindCo, and how data should move between them, no more duplicate entry.
5	Scheduling research	A recommended scheduling architecture (Mapsly, GHL, or another tool), with cost and expected benefit, before anything gets built.
6	Scheduling prototype	Staff get smart appointment recommendations by drive time, availability, and specialty, instead of checking five calendars by hand.
7	Partner program	Trade partner intake, attribution, communication, and reporting, fully automated end to end.
8	AI & advanced automation	A ranked list of the next AI opportunities (phone answering, lead qualification, reactivation) by impact, cost, and effort.

Where things stand right now

Week 1 is nearly closed out. A few concrete wins so far:

What's left to close Week 1:

- Fixed a gap that had left 814 leads with zero follow-up for months
- Found and are activating an entire dormant post-sale pipeline, deposit through installation and review request
- Found a second dormant pipeline built specifically to upsell customers who only bought part of their home
- Traced one root cause explaining four separate broken automations at once
- Merging duplicate contact and deal records (process is mapped, execution in progress)
- One end-to-end test of the full lead journey after this week's fixes
- Your sign-off on standardizing tag names for cleaner reporting

How you'll stay in the loop

A short daily update on what moved, plus a fuller Friday report: what was planned, what got done, what didn't and why, what we found, and anything that needs your call. Anything urgent, lost leads, lost revenue, or a security issue, gets flagged to you immediately rather than waiting for Friday.

What we need from you: a green light to close out Week 1 this week and move into Week 2 next, plus your sign-off on the tag standardization piece above. Everything else is already in motion.

This roadmap reflects the plan already discussed and will be updated as each week closes.